WITH RELIEF AND
FISCAL PROBLEMS*New Administration To Grapple
With Task of Obtaining
Needed Relief Funds*MUST ACT ON FIVE BILLS*Three Positions In The Cabinet Remain Yet To Be Filled

By International News Service
HARRISBURG, Jan. 16—Superior Court Judge Arthur H. James, on the eve of his inauguration as 34th Governor of Pennsylvania, today was confronted with immediate and grave relief and fiscal problems.

Shortly after Governor-elect James takes office at high noon tomorrow his Administration and the 1939 Legislature grapple with the task of obtaining needed relief funds.

The Legislature must act on five bills calling for the transfer of $34,000,000 from special funds to provide a "stop-gap" for relief until the end of the biennium on May 31.

Judge James was expected to come to the capital today from his Plymouth, Luzerne County, home where he put the finishing touches on his inaugural address over the week-end. Three positions remain yet to be filled.

His Home in Andalusia

ANDALUSIA, Jan. 16—Death late last evening claimed Lewis W. Cook, husband of Myrtle L. Cook, at his residence on Colonial avenue, here.

Death was due to pneumonia. The deceased was the son of Ellen B. and the late William Cook. In addition to his wife and mother, Mr. Cook is survived by a sister, Mrs. Jane L. Taylor, and a brother, William W. Cook.

He was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad as a signalman, and was affiliated with the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen of America.

The funeral service will be conducted by the Rev. Percy Brown, rector of All Saints' Episcopal Church, Torresdale, on Thursday at two p. m., from the funeral home of Harold H. Haefner, Bristol Pike, Cornwells Heights. Friends may call Wednesday evening.

St. Ann's Church Is Scene Of A Sunday Wedding

The wedding of Miss Fanny R. Scancelli, daughter of Vincent Scancelli, 9 Lincoln avenue, and James Favata, son of Joseph Favata, Trenton, N. J., took place yesterday at three p. m., in St. Ann's Catholic Church. The Rev. Peter Pinci, officiated. Miss Frances Tamburella played the wedding march, and Miss Yolanda DiFelice, Lincoln avenue, sang "Mother at Your Feet Is Kneeling."

Miss Yolanda Lapergola, Grand avenue, was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Mary Scancelli, 1122 Wood street, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Rose Constantini, 1024 Wood street, a niece of the bride. The best man was Alfred Immordino, Trenton, and the usher was Frank Sperrazza, Trenton, N. J.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, John Scancelli, was towed in white satin. The front of the bodice was shirred and cut with the V-shape neckline. The sleeves were long and puffed at the shoulders and the long full skirt ended in a train. The bridal veil of tulle edged with lace, fell from a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried white calla lilies.

The maid of honor was attractive in a white moire gown, made sleeveless with low square cut neckline. The skirt was long and full, and had a short train. With this was worn a short bolero style dubonnet velvet jacket with short puffed sleeves. She wore a large picture hat of velvet, dubonnet satin slippers and carried white roses. The bridesmaids were attired in gowns fashioned like that worn by the maid of honor. Their dresses were white moire with royal blue velvet jackets and accessories. Each attendant carried white roses.

A reception was held in Mutual Aid Hall, 400 guests attending. The couple left last evening for New York City where they will spend a few days. The bride travelled in a teal blue crepe dress trimmed in brown, brown Hudson seal coat, brown hat and accessories. The couple will reside at the home of the bride.

Prior to the ceremony, a dinner was held at the bride's home for the bridal party and the immediate families.

STAMP CLUB MEETING
The next meeting of Bristol Stamp Club will be held Tuesday evening at eight o'clock in Bristol Presbyterian Church. Trade and sale of stamps will be conducted after the business meeting. There will be auction of stamps, 10% to go to the club. Each person may take several sets. This meeting will determine future meetings. All stamp collectors are invited to attend.

Social Security To Have Representative Here Tues.

A representative of the Social Security Board will be available to residents of this area from one to three p. m. tomorrow at Room 201 in the Bristol Post Office. It was announced today by Michael J. Shortley, Manager of the Philadelphia Office.

Mr. Shortley said the Board's representative will be prepared to advise and assist persons desiring to file claims for Old-Age Insurance, to receive applications for Social Security account numbers, and to advise employers who desire clarification of their rights and obligations under the Social Security Act.

The Board's representative also will be prepared to disseminate information with respect to all phases of the Act, Mr. Shortley said.

TREMENDOUS VALUE
ON PRE-WAR COLONIES*Territories Rich in Diamonds and Phosphates Make the Colonies Worth Fighting For*CONSIDERED BIG PRIZE

(Germany's demand for colonies has begun to rank as World Problem Number One. The following article, third and last in a series, deals with this dynamite-laden international question.)

By Russell F. Anderson

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Jan. 16—(INS)—Germany wants her pre-war colonies returned.

Great Britain, holder of the majority of these territories, says "no."

And over that international dispute revolves a question which in the future upset the peace of Europe.

What are these mandate colonies? Where are they? Do they have value? What gives Germany a right to ask for them? On what ground does Great Britain say no?

At the beginning of the World War, Germany had constructed a colonial empire of more than 1,000,000 square miles, five times the area of the Reich, with a population of 14,000,000 or about one-fourth of the population of the German territory on the continent.

In Africa, she had Togoland, the Cameroons, German Southwest Africa, and German East Africa. In the Bismarck Archipelago, the Caroline, Solomon, Marshall, and Samoan islands. In Asia she had Kiaochow. Invested capital in overseas Germany was estimated at 500,000,000 marks.

The colonies quickly went with the beginning of World War hostilities as the Reich was unprepared for colonial warfare. Under the terms of the Versailles treaty, the colonies were put under the protection of the league with allied powers given mandate control.

Togoland and the Cameroons were divided between France and England; German East Africa became the British mandate of Tanganyika with a small portion given to Belgium; German Southwest Africa became a South African mandate; German New Guinea with the Bismarck and Solomon Islands became a New Zealand mandate.

Woodbourne Wife Begins Action In Divorce Suit

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 16—In the Court of Common Pleas, here, Marion M. Hazard has filed an action in divorce against her husband, Charles Howard Hazard, charging him with desertion and cruel and barbarous treatment.

In the libel in divorce filed in the office of Probationary Ezra Miller, of Newtown, the libellant avers that she and the respondent were married June 7, 1930, at Woodbourne. The present address of the libellant is Woodbourne, Middletown township, and that of the respondent is Langhorne.

The libellant alleges that the respondent deserted her in June, 1934, and that he made life intolerable for her.

PLAY PINOCCHLE

A card party was held Friday evening in F. P. A. Hall, by Daughters of America, Council No. 58. Pinochle was enjoyed and prizes awarded the winners. High scores were attained by: Mrs. William Barr, 787; N. Elliott, 737; M. Terneson, 730; Mrs. Roy Ott, 725; John Brudon, 722. Refreshments were served. Mrs. Warren Thompson, was chairman.

The Robins That Sing
In January

(By "The Stroller")

Mrs. Havard Himelright, Edgely, thought she might possibly be "seeing things" when she noticed a robin hopping about on a table on the lawn of her home early this morning. So she called her husband to verify the fact. And sure enough, there sat a robin, eating the tid-bits placed on the table by the Himelrights as blithely as if it were a day in June instead of January.

"And in a few minutes a large red bird flew to the table to get its breakfast," added the Himelrights in telling of the surprises of the morning when the temperature was but a few degrees above zero.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

During the annual meeting of the Newtown Exchange Club, Wilson F. Swayze, Newtown plumbing and heating contractor, was elected president for a six-month term. Dr. A. J. Strathie retired after a very successful term in office.

Mr. Swayze will have the assistance of Morris Savidge as vice-president, and Horace Watson will continue as secretary-treasurer. The books of the treasurer were audited and approved.

The old board of control consists of Robert LaRue, Cecil V. Wilson-Lavery and Dr. W. A. Roberts. Because Robert LaRue is unable to attend for some time, David Watson was appointed to fill the unexpired term. To these older members of the board of control there were elected an additional three, Clinton Greenlee, Elvin Bothwell and William Feaster. The new board will consist of six members.

Sponsored by the Woman's Club, American Legion, Rotary, Kiwanis, Chamber of Commerce and the Business Men's Association, a town meeting will be held in the high school auditorium, Quakertown, at eight p. m., on Thursday, January 26, for the purpose of discussing the proposed borough manager system.

A speaker will be engaged to explain the system, and opportunity will be given for the citizens to ask questions on the subject.

During the Christmas holidays, John Grimm of Pittsburgh, and William Satterthwaite of Yardley, both members of George School Faculty, took a bicycle trip through the western part of Cuba.

Havana (Havana) was nearly impossible for an English speaking bicyclist to tour, because of the crowds of interested Cubans who followed them to the point of blocking traffic. They found a country, poor and mountainous, but very picturesque. Among the things they saw growing, were sugar cane, pineapples, and bananas.

Some five hundred miles of bicycling were done on the island. They traveled on roads that were impassible for automobiles, and rode to an elevation of over one thousand feet. These two young men lived in the simplest way. They subsisted on a fruit diet, and the nights were spent in sugar cane fields, under bridges, and in jungles. Thus, they could travel for thirty cents a piece per day.

They found the island very militaristic with soldiers and officers everywhere. In a town about the size of Newtown, approximately fifty people would be in uniform.

John and Bill got acquainted with these gentlemen as the army officers and police force are all one. It seems that it is against the law to wear shorts in Cuba, and this is the garment that these two wore throughout their trip. On the eighth day out.

PATTERSON-CORBETT
WEDDING IS PERFORMED*Rev. J. C. Zook Officiates At Nuptials in Bristol
M. E. Church*50 ATTEND RECEPTION

The Bristol Methodist Church was the scene of a wedding, Saturday evening, when Miss Ethel May Corbett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Corbett, 425 Buckley street, became the bride of George G. Patterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patterson, 216 Cedar street. The ceremony was performed at eight o'clock by the Rev. J. Carpenter Zook, in the presence of relatives and friends. Miss Carolyn Betz, Edgely, played "Lohengrin's Wedding March" as the bridal party entered the church.

The couple was attended by Miss Grace Murphy, Lafayette street, and Robert Patterson, Jr., Trenton, N. J., brother of the groom.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street-length dress of Eleanor blue crepe. The bodice had pin tucks at the shoulders, and featured a high square neckline. The sleeves were short and puffed. Irish point lace trimmed the neckline and sleeves. The skirt was circular with tiny tucks at the hemline. An off-the-face navy blue felt hat, trimmed in light blue, navy gabardine slippers and kid gloves completed her costume, and she wore a corsage of pink roses.

Miss Murphy was attired in a street-length dress of navy blue crepe. A ruffle of self-material trimmed the sleeves and neckline, and a maroon velvet bow was worn on the left shoulder. She wore an off-the-face navy blue felt hat trimmed in light blue, and navy blue slippers and gloves. Her corsage was of talisman roses.

A reception supper was served at the home of the bride's parents, 50 attending. The couple will make their home with the bride's parents.

BABIES ARRIVE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crosby, 628 Bath street, have been receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. Crosby's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Mount, 240 Roosevelt street. The baby will be named Gerald Eugene.

A daughter was born Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Harkins, Spruce street.

they landed up in a Spanish speaking police station. John and Bill's knowledge of Spanish was limited, but in a short time, they understood that they must put on their pants.

William Satterthwaite took over one hundred natural color photographs which he expects to show.

The First National Bank and Trust Company of Newtown held the annual meeting recently.

The following officers and directors were elected: President, Horace B. Hogeland; vice-president, John W. Cooper; cashier, Brinton Hogeland; tellers, Redman Headley, Leroy Suber and Harold Craven; clerks, Mrs. Lena Patterson and the Misses Grace Krusen, Mildred Pearson and Elizabeth Tomlinson.

Directors, Horace B. Hogeland, John W. Cooper, Jerome McMullen, Lafayette Finney, Albert Fisher, Peter Morris, Mary S. Walker and Lewis Satterthwaite.

A banquet was served in the evening at the Century Club room. Sixty persons were in attendance.

Guests from Philadelphia were Mr. Boyd, Mr. Arnold and Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Hogeland was master of ceremonies and the Gamble Concert Company rendered music.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Attacks On The Press

Washington, Jan. 14.
IT WOULD BE interesting to know what really is the frame of mind of these Administration spokesmen who make a regular business of denouncing the press. For example, there is the voluble and vituperative, but very intelligent Mr. Ickes.

HIS stock thesis, expounded the other night, is that the press is owned by sinister financial interests, controlled by the advertisers, unfair to the working man and prints the news only when it pleases it. Yet the following morning the newspapers printed Mr. Ickes' speech lambasting them more fully than they printed Mr. Gannett's speech defending them.

In addition, more space was given Mr. Ickes' denunciation by papers

Wires*Woman Burned To Death

Landsdale, Jan. 16—Trapped by smoke as she entered her blazing home, Mrs. Jennie C. Logan, 56, of nearby Montgomery Township, was burned to death today while trying to retrieve valuables. Mrs. Logan and her daughter had fled from the house when the fire started. Her daughter went to a neighboring farm house for aid, and when she returned her mother was not in sight. Firemen found the woman's body in a second floor room.

Shoots Woman; Kills Himself

Easton, Jan. 16—Shot through the breast by her employer, just before he killed himself, Mrs. Meta Farley, 50, was reported "out of danger" today, following an emergency operation in which the bullet was removed at Batts Hospital, a private institution, in Easton.

The shooting, police said, climaxed a quarrel which started when Daniel Simmenroth, 65, of West Portal, N. J., objected to Mrs. Farley going out with Albert Hagaman, 46. When the woman, employed as Simmenroth's cook, refused to return to the house, Simmenroth, authorities said, pulled a pistol from his pocket and shot her. As Mrs. Farley slumped to the ground, Simmenroth fired a shot into his mouth, and when the wound failed to prove fatal, he went to the second floor of his home, where he died instantly as a second bullet pierced his temple.

ELKS TO SEE FAMOUS
BASBALL FILM TONIGHT*Number of American League Players and Coaches Will Also Be Present*EXPECT BIG AUDIENCE

It is expected that a large number of members of Bristol Lodge of Elks will be present this evening in the Elks' Home on Radcliffe street on the occasion of "Baseball Night," when the new American League four-reel sound film, "First Century of Baseball," will be shown through the courtesy of the Philadelphia Athletics' baseball club.

This is one of the finest films of its kind ever presented, and shows baseball from its birth in 1839 to the present day, with many of the leading stars of the game appearing therein. Among the features of the film are important shots of the Old Timers' game played at Cleveland, July 6th, 1935, the 1938 World's Series, and many other interesting events.

In addition to the showing of the film, a number of American League players, coaches and sports celebrities will be present and give talks.

AGNES BRUNNER WILLS
$500 TO MISSIONARY SOCIETY

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 16—Everything in the way of personal property and real estate that the late Elizabeth Agnes Brunner, 109 Mechanics street, this place, possessed at the time of her death, is bequeathed to scores of friends and relatives. She died on December 23, leaving a personal estate listed at $5000 and real estate listed at $2000.

Her will has been probated at the office of the Bucks county Register, making Miss Florence Fell, of this place, and J. J. Johnson, Ambler, executor. Several codicils were filed with the will.

The house at 109 Mechanics street was bequeathed to Miss Fell. Money bequests were as follows: J. Purdy Weiss, Doylestown banker, $500; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Johnson, Ambler, $500 apiece; Mrs. Lillie Johnson Cline, Ambler, $100; Mrs. Americus Hellyer, Plainfield, N. J., $100; Mrs. Charles Bilyan, $100.

A bequest of $500 was left to the Missionary Society of the Doylestown Presbyterian Church.

Household goods, including every piece of furniture and other things were distributed among a long list of friends named in the will.

Hayes Street, Injured
At Terrace Cafe*ATTENDED WITH FAMILY
Group Had Entered Cafe Only
Few Minutes Before
Accident Occurred

NEWPORTVILLE, Jan. 16—A Bristol woman patron at a cafe in Newport Terrace yesterday afternoon fell down steps leading to the basement and was fatally injured.

The woman, Mrs. Sadie Whitcoe, 39, of 264 Hayes street, Bristol, had just entered the cafe, when the accident occurred. She was removed at once to the Abington Hospital, where she died within a few hours of a fractured skull.

Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo was called and upon investigation learned that Mrs. Whitcoe, accompanied by her son, George, 16; daughter, Evelyn, 18; brother, Edward, 20, of Bristol; and Walter Fry, Holmesburg, had entered the Terrace Cafe and ordered sandwiches. Mrs. Whitcoe then went to a side room and in doing so walked through the wrong door. She opened the door and fell down the stairs leading to the basement.

Mrs. Whitcoe and her children, along with her brother who is a member of the Stone Harbor, N. J., coast guards, had been visiting during the afternoon at the home of George Grafelner, which is only a short distance from the Terrace Cafe. Leaving the Grafelner home they went to the cafe for something to eat.

Mrs. Whitcoe's husband died only a few months ago in a sanitarium.

34 FATAL ACCIDENTS
LISTED IN BUCKS, '38*Total of 695 Accidents Investigated by Motor Police of County*TRAVELED 562,515 MILES

Thirty-four fatal accidents were investigated and a total of 695 accidents in all listed during 1938, by members of Pennsylvania Motor Police located at the three barracks within the confines of Bucks County, according to report issued from Harrisburg headquarters of the motor police.

The officers located at barracks at Oxford Valley, Doylestown and Quakertown, made 7,172 arrests during that 12-month period, and in carrying out their duties covered in all 562,515 miles.

The personnel of the three sub-stations, where calls are answered at any hour of the day or night, follows:

South Langhorne: Corporal R. D. Egan, Privates G. F. Carfagno, S. J. Butavage, B. F. Bridge, J. R. Harris, J. P. Mitchell, C. J. Czernik, S. H. Smith, F. J. Christian, H. C. Dando, J. I. Swann, G. S. Unger, A. B. Erdman, D. C. Wentzel, T. A. Cavanaugh, J. J. Byle, T. W. Jones, R. B. Reeser.

Farm Show Arena Is Huge
Building; Seats 7,639

HARRISBURG, Jan. 16—(INS)—Pertinent facts about Pennsylvania's new $1,200,000 farm show arena, scene of the annual Farm Show opening today:

Dimensions—(outside)—240 feet x 348 feet, with a wing 48 feet x 172 feet. Covers ground area 91,999 square feet. Arena floor—120 feet wide and 240 feet long. Enclosed by five-foot wall, at top of which 19 tiers of seats ascend at easy backward angle.

Seating—7,639 permanent seats (making it larger than the huge Hershey Arena), with space available for enough temporary seats to accommodate a total of 12,000. A pleasing color scheme has been used in the seating plan. First six rows are painted blue; next four rows maroon; next six rows red; and upper rows in a neutral shade.

Lighting—fully illuminated the arena will utilize the equivalent of 54,000 candle power. Suspended from the ceiling are three domes each containing 47 lamps of 200 candle power. Auxiliary to these are 18 box-like side fixtures each containing seven lamps. Automatic illumination in case of emergency is also provided.

Accessories to main arena—rest rooms, toilet facilities, dormitories, shower baths, instant hot water; meeting and assembly rooms, permanent horse stalls, and other features. An exhibition room 44 feet by 22 feet, seating 5000 another meeting room with seating arrangements for 325; another auditorium with 800 seats and still a fourth with 1200 seats are included in the structure.

Comparison with Madison Square Garden—In ground area the Farm Show Arena is larger than New York's Madison Square Garden. If a third course of seats up against the roof had been provided, as in the case of the Garden, the number of permanent seats would also be greater. The unobstructed space of the floor of the Farm Show Arena is 11 feet wider than the New York hall, but the long axis of both ovals are identical, 240 feet.

AGE AND APPEARANCE

So many visible effects of the passage of time are recorded in the appearance of the skin, that it is easy to understand why it has been said that man is no older than he looks. It is entirely understandable that appearance, in respect to age, is reflected in one's own consciousness. He comes to feel older than he is and older than he looks.

Vigor and vitality are apt to be registered in the skin, and firmness and resiliency are preserved with health. This does not prevent the gravings of care and of fret from appearing in the lines of the face, the total effect often providing compensation by the fact that the definite lines of character are strengthened.

No one is really complimented by the painter who works out the lines of the face or so tones them down that the heritage of the years in experience and reflection are lost to the individual in the effort to make him appear younger and "better looking." The visage of Lincoln appears to best advantage in those untouched photographs or painted portraits wherein are preserved each rugged line and obtrusive mole. Yet there is much that enters into the countenance of Lincoln which testifies to the needless abrasions of time upon texture in early years.

Science has been too long in learning that the disintegration of epidermis cells is the physiological cause for vanishing beauty. If these cells could be built up so as to preserve the appearance of health and defeat skin aging, the benefit would be reaped by multitudes who are not interested in beauty lotions or face lifting.

IN TERMS OF SMELL

So it seems that the English language is suffering from the lack of words properly descriptive of smells. To supply that lack, the members of the Smell Society are preparing a list of descriptive words which, they say, may run in number to perhaps 500.

"There are hundreds of descriptive words in English to identify color through all its most subtle shades. Many, such as beige, are of recent origin. But," they say, "we do not possess a single word which specifies a kind of smell, like those of roast turkey, minnom, wool or tar, for example."

It should be noted that the Smell Society is an English organization composed of wine experts, tasters, gourmets, medical men and research chemists. Britishers are rather inclined to that sort of thing. That is, if somebody conceives that there is something which ought to be done he forms a society for the doings and finds no lack of support.

There always seems to be plenty of persons who are ready to turn their attention to supplying needs, the lack of which have not been particularly apparent to others who are concerned with what they consider the truly vital things of life.

A female quail was caught by Sam Ahlee near Mill and Wood streets on Saturday evening. The bird was kindly cared for and will be let loose on one of the farms nearby.

An event of unusual interest has occurred in the history of the Farmers Bank of Bucks County, located at Bristol. The present year of 1877 marks the 50th year or half century, of the present efficient and careful cashier, Charles T. Fredell's connection with that institution. In 1815, or 63 years ago, the bank was started and after 13 years Mr. Fredell came into it as a bank boy. His carefulness and readiness for the work that was assigned to him, was always apparent, and as he passed the several gradations up to the honored and trusted position of cashier, his attention grew with him, and today can be said of him what probably can be credited to no other cashier, and that is that he never in all that time, paid a wrong check.

The Friends School closed for the Summer last Tuesday, with exercises participated in by most of the pupils, who, under the effective management of the principal, Miss Susan A. Mitchell, and her assistants, conducted themselves in a highly creditable manner. Quite a number of the parents and friends were present.

Brelford, for $175.

It is estimated by one of our prominent truckers that about 1200 crates of strawberries have been sold in Bristol this season. A crate contains between 32 and 36 quarts. At this rate, 1200 crates contained 40,500 quarts, which at six cents per quart would amount to $2,448, quite a successful season.

says of the newspapers is true, the newspapers wouldn't print it. Can anyone imagine the sinister interests whom Mr. Ickes insists own the newspapers permitting Mr. Ickes to say in their sinisterly controlled columns that they are sinister interests and do own the papers? If they did that they would be less sinister than stupid. Actually, of course, it is an ancient and well-recognized custom among a certain breed of politicians to hammer the press. It is very old stuff for politicians to deny their indiscreet and damaging remarks which get into print (Mr. Hopkins is the most recent case in point) and it is equally old stuff for politicians placed on the defensive to howl about the venal and licentious press.

BUT no sensible publisher objects to that. No sound newspaper editor or owner wants to stop the Ickes trades. Only the foolish ones resort in kind. Every informed newspaper man knows that good newspapers thrive on that kind of attack; that it is a sure sign their criticism is effective and their aim true. The time for newspaper publishers to worry is not when the job-holding politicians abuse and deny, but when they don't. When that happens it is a disturbing sign, an indication that something or someone has slipped. There is nothing more healthful for a newspaper than a large, continuous dose of political denunciation. It is the surest sign of journalistic well-being. No politician ever denounces an influential paper or denies the words of an ineffectual writer.

PARTICULARLY, newspapers should welcome denunciation from men like Mr. Ickes, whose inability to refrain from personalities, congenial virulence and airy disregard of fact would react against his own case, even if he had a good one. It is easy enough to find things about newspapers which justify criticism. No one maintains they are without flaw and no one contends there are not bad newspapers. But the sort of criticism practiced by this Administration and the sort of charges made by the Ickeses, the Minton and the Blacks is so wide of the mark as to spend itself in the air. It is the kind of stuff to which newspapers have been accustomed by generations of politicians who have toward the press the natural hostility of the criticized toward the critic. When the press so behaves as to remove that hostility it will deserve more criticism than it gives or gets.

AS a matter of fact, while nearly every President and many an office-holder has had his personal grievances against certain critical newspapers and newspaper men, this is the only Administration which has made hostility to the press a general policy. And that is the more curious because no Administration that can be recalled had as kind and considerate treatment from the press as this one has had. Particularly is this true in regard to the President's family. The fiction has been promoted that the bulk of the newspapers are against Mr. Roosevelt. The facts do not bear this out. One fact is that in one whole section of the country ninety-eight per cent. of the papers are for him. Another is that the New York newspaper with a circulation twice as large as any other in the country is—and has been from the start—as strongly for Mr. Roosevelt as, for example Mr. Ickes or Mr. Hopkins.

IT isn't even true that most of the so-called columnists are anti-Roosevelt. A count of these will reveal that a majority lean toward the President. One of these is Mrs. Roosevelt, who more and more is using her widely syndicated and highly lucrative column to promote the New Deal policies and aid the New Deal propaganda. If newspapers venture to criticize this or any other commercial or political activity of the family, they are made to seem wicked and unfeeling by Mrs. Roosevelt's plea that she and her children be allowed to live their "normal lives."

Miss Letty Everitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Everitt, Middletown Township, is ill in Temple University Hospital, Philadelphia, with streptococcal infection. Blood transfusions were given Miss Everitt yesterday. This is the second similar attack for the young woman, who is a student nurse at that institution.

Sunday guests at the home of Charles Haefner were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kaercher, Albert Kaercher, Philadelphia; and Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Stumm, Merchantville, N. J.

Wednesday is the scheduled evening for the monthly meeting of Hulmeville-Middletown Parent-Teacher Association, the session taking place in the school building.

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY" by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXIII

Matresser, a few mornings later, looked up with a frown from his task of examining the breach of one of his guns. There was no mistaking the booming voice, the heavy tread of the approaching guest.

"Who the devil let that fellow in, Humphreys?" he muttered.

"He never waits to be let in anywhere, that Dutchman don't, m'lord," Humphreys complained.

The door was flung open. Mijnheer van Westreheene stepped across the threshold—a huge grotesque figure in his short shooting coat and his long legs tightly encased in breeches and gaiters.

"Good morning, Lord Matresser," he boomed out with spurious heartiness. "What a day! A clear sky, how the pheasants will tumble!"

"I see you are carrying your gun," Matresser remarked. "You didn't expect to use it in the lane coming up, did you?"

"I did not. I say to myself when I leave the boat—perhaps Lord Matresser will like an hour's or so walk before lunch. If so, there am I for company—and behold, dinner is in the pot!"

"Sorry to disappoint you," Matresser regretted. "All my outlying land is on the other side and I never go near my covers on off days."

There was a timid knock at the door. Humphreys threw it open and Elisabeth entered. She stopped short when she saw van Westreheene.

"I am so sorry," she apologized. "I understood you were alone."

"Come in please, Mademoiselle Stamler," Matresser invited. "I am just looking through my kit before I push off—not that Humphreys ever forgets anything."

"I come and I try to tell Lord Matresser what is too beautiful a day to spend thinking of anything but sport," van Westreheene put in with a bow of welcome. "It is a day to roam the country with a gun on one's shoulder and to kill. The light is wonderful."

"I was going to the village," Elisabeth remarked, turning to Matresser. "I wondered if I could do anything for you?"

"Or me?" van Westreheene proposed. "If there is no shooting I go to the village, too. I post your letters, I send your telegrams—what you wish."

Matresser smiled. He was beginning to find the Dutchman's persistence amusing.

"My telegrams are always telephoned to me," he confided, "and Yates sees to all the letters. Perhaps, after all, I had better accept your invitation and take out a gun for an hour."

"Excellent!" van Westreheene exclaimed, rising to his feet.

"May I come?" Elisabeth asked. "You can beat for us with that shooting stick," Matresser suggested with a smile.

"Let me telephone for one of the lads to hurry up on his bicycle, your lordship," Humphreys begged, "or let me come myself."

"If you wish I will carry the game," van Westreheene proposed. "Have it your own way," Matresser agreed.

They strolled across the Park and reached the lower gate leading into the wood.

"You take the fourth ride," his host told van Westreheene. "We will take the third here. You had better keep about fifteen yards ahead of us and if you were not such a devilishly precise shot I would ask you to be careful because it is rather thin here and there and the drives are not cut straight."

Van Westreheene went off as directed. He had scarcely reached the corner of the ride when he stopped short, looking upwards. His gun flashed into position and a pigeon came tumbling down. He thrust the bird into his pocket, reloaded and turned down the fourth ride according to directions. Matresser gave him a short start and then strolled on. They had barely gone a dozen paces when a cocker spaniel ranging ahead put up a woodcock which Matresser shot neatly between two trees. A minute or two later a cock pheasant came flying over and fell to Matresser's first barrel.

"Well, it looks as though we were going to have all we can do this morning," he remarked, as he disposed of another woodcock.

After that there was a few moments lull.

"The Dutchman doesn't seem to be getting much," Matresser muttered. "I haven't heard his gun since he shot that pigeon."

"I wonder where he is," Elisabeth speculated. "You told him to keep twenty or thirty yards ahead but I cannot see him."

"Neither can I," her companion exclaimed with some irritation. "I'm not surprised. Humphreys was complaining about him only this morning. He is always about twenty or thirty yards ahead of the line. I expect he is almost at the other end of the wood by now."

He pointed into the wood. Half a dozen cock pheasants had risen from a holly bush which should have been within a few yards of van Westreheene's beat, and a moment later a woodcock came lobbing up which Matresser, with a long shot, secured.

"His bird, but he wasn't there."

Then, for the first time, Matresser turned his head and looked behind him down the parallel ride. Almost at the same instant a little gleam of sunshine broke through the scanty foliage of a tall ash tree and flashed upon something brilliant.

Matresser had no time to shout. He caught Elisabeth by the wrist and flung her to the ground, sprawling down himself by her side. They heard the buzzing of shot exactly where Matresser's head had been!

Matresser sprang up as the echoes of the report died away. Half way between the next ride and his own, well behind him instead of in front, the Dutchman was cowering behind a tree.

"My God!" Matresser exclaimed. "He tried to shoot me! Stay where you are, Elisabeth."

With his gun charged, watching every movement of the Dutchman, Matresser plunged into the undergrowth. Van Westreheene seemed to hesitate for a moment but his half-raised gun came down under his arm. He gave a little shout of horror.

"Ach, but I am sorry!" he cried. "There was a low woodcock. I would not have shot but I thought you were behind."

Matresser made no reply. He strode through the bushes recklessly. In a few moments he had reached the Dutchman.

"Didn't I tell you to keep twenty yards ahead of us?" he asked fiercely.

"So I started to walk," van Westreheene explained. "I paused to light a cigarette—so—and you must have passed off quicker than I thought. I regret deeply."

Matresser leaned his gun against a tree. His eyes were watching the Dutchman with a steady concentration. He strode up to him and laid his hand upon his gun.

"What is it that you wish?" van Westreheene demanded. "I am sorry. You would take my gun away?"

"Break it," Matresser ordered. Van Westreheene obeyed, handing the gun to Matresser who drew out the second cartridge, glanced at it and thrust it into his pocket.

"Number three," he exclaimed. "You would try to shoot woodcock and pheasants with number three, van Westreheene! Why not a rifle and have done with it?"

"I fill my bag from an old box," the other declared angrily. "I did not look at every cartridge. There are sixes and sevens here."

"I see," Matresser observed. "The three were there just in case, I suppose!"

"You cannot suppose," the Dutchman shouted, "that I wish to commit murder!"

"If I had not turned round at that precise moment and the sun had not flashed on the barrel of your gun, that is precisely what you would have done."

"Am I a lunatic then that I should try to shoot my friend in his own woods?" van Westreheene demanded.

"What have I to gain by such folly? I beg you will permit me to pass. I wish to make my apologies to Mademoiselle."

Matresser seized the Dutchman's gun by the barrels and threw it twenty or thirty yards away into the undergrowth, then he picked up his own weapon.

"Do you see that gate?" he pointed out. "That's the way home—the way you came. Take it and get on your boat as quickly as you can."

"But my gun!"

"You shall have it back tomorrow if it pleases me to send it back. I may deposit it at the police station instead. Do as I tell you. The gate!"

Van Westreheene's features were convulsed with fury. For a moment it seemed as though he were about to spring at his antagonist. The veins on his forehead were swollen and his fists were clenched. Matresser, however, handling his gun with perfect calmness, watched him with an almost tigerish gleam in his eyes. The Dutchman swung round and flung himself through the undergrowth in a straight line for the gate.

"You do not think," Elisabeth asked Matresser when he rejoined her, "that he shot at us on purpose?"

"He shot at me and he meant killing," Matresser replied gravely. "The blackguard had number three cartridges in each barrel of his gun."

"But why? What have you done to him?"

"Not half what I should like to," he answered under his breath.

She passed her hand through his hair. "Well, it was all very thrilling," she said. "I could not make it out at first. I thought you were angry because he had been car less, then I saw his face and I knew there was more in it. When you strode up to him and took the gun away I was terrified."

"These oversized men," he told her smiling, "always crumple up easily."

That afternoon Matresser entered his study somewhat precipitately and shook his fist at the faithful Yates.

"Look here," he expostulated. "I wish you would leave off wailing that wretched old shirt of yours out of the window. Surely you have got through your message by now."

Yates returned the handkerchief to his pocket and retired into the shadows of the rooms.

"It was not a shirt, sir. However, I have finished. Rosa has invited me to tea with her on board the yacht, to say goodbye."

"I thought they would be leaving soon," his master observed. "You can't go, Henry. I've lost my confidence in that little outfit. I'm not going to have you whisked off to the German Archipelago or some such inaccessible place. The yacht is out of bounds, remember. You can pursue your amorous adventures and your deep-laid schemes in the parlor of the Matresser Arms."

"You will permit me to write a note," Yates begged.

"By all means," his employer assented. "Madame will have plenty to tell you. I am going to give the harbor master notice that the Daphne is to go out on tomorrow evening's tide at the latest."

Henry Yates blinked behind his spectacles. His attitude indicated a desire for further information.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL

Paramount has at last found the perfect vehicle for its newest star, Olympe Bradna, in the gay comedy, "Say It In French," which opened last night at the Bristol Theatre. And, to make good better, Ray Milland forms an ideal screen partner for the pert and vivacious actress.

"Say It In French" combines sophisticated farce with merry romance as it tells what happens when a handsome young American playboy, Milland, comes home from a trip abroad with a French bride, Miss Bradna, only to find that he must immediately announce his engagement to a wealthy debutante or allow his father to go bankrupt. Miss Bradna, always the practical Parisienne, convinces him to become engaged while she, in order to avoid separation, takes a job as maid in his family's home.

GRAND

With Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon as the stellar attractions in a swiftly-moving modern-day story, combining high comedy and impelling drama, Samuel Goldwyn's "The Cowboy and the Lady" was last night presented on the screen of the Grand Theatre and won thundering plaudits from a capacity audience. The suspenseful tale of a Washington society girl who gambles position and fortune to marry a sun-browned cowboy of the far west, after a unique meeting at a Florida rodeo, is dramatized with telling effect against beautiful backgrounds. The story maintains a rapid pace throughout, and is highlighted by scenes of rich comedy and sparkling direction.

Cooper and Miss Oberon, as the cowboy and the lady of this title, prove again that they are two of Hollywood's leading players, and their serio-comic portrayals will win them even more fans throughout the world. The cast is rounded out by such notables as Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Mabel Todd, Fuzzy Knight and Henry Kolker. H. C. Potter has directed the picture with vigor and liveliness, making the most of brilliant backgrounds and effective lighting.

Wells Novel Sees A World Dictator

Wednesday, The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin will begin serial publication of a new novel by H. G. Wells, entitled "The Holy Terror."

In it the great English writer delivers what he himself is said to regard as the most devastating blow yet struck at the idea of dictatorship, for his "Holy Terror" is a world dictator, ruling with even greater ruthlessness than any of his predecessors.

Wells, urgent advocate of a worldwide federation of peoples, one of the world's foremost independent and advanced thinkers, already has expressed his opinion of the current dictators in unrestrained language. In "The Holy Terror" he carries their theories of government to what he believes to be a logical conclusion in a novel plunging far into the future.

Newspaper publication of Wells' newest novel, "The Holy Terror," story of a World Dictator, at this time is most unusual, since it has not yet appeared in book form. The ordinary course would be for the author first to publish his book, then later to release serial publication rights.

But in the case of "The Holy Terror," Wells himself reversed this usual process because, as he explained, its whole intent and purpose is so vital to the world today that he felt it imperative it should reach the widest possible reading public in the shortest possible time.

sitions in his Cabinet remained un-

Meantime, retiring Democratic Gov. George H. Earle was prepared to turn over the executive mansion to the incoming chief executive and his 23-year-old daughter, Miss Dorothy James, youngest "first lady" in the Commonwealth's history.

Harrisburg welcomed the vanguard of 50,000 visitors as state and city agencies struggled with 11th-hour arrangements for handling the crowds. Hourly, additional numbers came by train, bus and automobile to witness what probably will be the largest and most colorful inaugural ceremonies in years.

Prospect of fair weather buoyed capital hopes for a record turnout.

An estimated 40,000 persons, representing at least 45 counties, were to march in tomorrow's parade in tribute to the Luzerne county jurist who led the Republican party back into power after a four-year lapse.

The parade will begin at the close of Judge James' address from the inaugural stand erected at the foot of the capitol steps. In the line of march will be National Guardsmen and Regular Army soldiers, and scores of bands and drum and bugle corps.

Declare Farm Lease Not Valid; Suit Lost

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 16.—In the Bucks County Court, Friday, a jury returned a verdict in favor of Harry and Mary Gerard, the First Mechanics National Bank, of Trenton, and William S. Lovett, executors of the estate of Henry W. Comfort, defendant in two suits brought by Theodore R. Palmer and his wife for the sums of $700 and $500, respectively, for the value of crops the latter couple say they grew on the former Palmer Farms, near Morrisville.

The farms were formerly owned by George M. Palmer, father of the plaintiff, and were sold at foreclosure sales while the crops were growing. Palmer, the plaintiff, in his suits declared that he had leased the farms from his father before the foreclosure and therefore was entitled to the crops or their value.

The defendants declared the lease was not valid and filed 15 reasons to show this. After the trial, which lasted two days, the jury returned the verdict upholding the defendant's contention.

Assistant United States District Attorney J. Lawrence Grim, of Morrisville, represented the defendants, while Edgar T. Snipes, also of Morrisville, represented the Palmers.

BENSALEM MATMEN LOSE TO GEORGE SCHOOL AT NEWTOWN

Meet Ends in Favor of George
School by The Score of 17 to 14

MATCHES WERE EVEN

Only Two Falls Scored During The Entire Competition

NEWTOWN, Jan. 16—The only mat team to down coach George Reimer's Bensalem Owl grapplers last year—George School, who won the meet on their own floor, 24-11—have seen to it that the Blue and Grey boys won't have an undefeated season this year either. For they downed Bensalem here Saturday afternoon in an evenly-matched meet, 17-14. The meet was the first official one on the Owls' 1939 schedule.

Nevertheless, as indicated by the score, the matches were practically all even. This may be further shown by the fact that there were only two falls in the meet, one for each team, while the other seven bouts were all scored on referee's decisions in seven minute periods.

Throughout the entire meet, the score saw-sawed back and forth after practically every bout, and with each team gaining a fall, the ultimate outcome was eventually decided in the number of referee's decisions scored by each squad. In this department, it was even-Stephen at three apiece until the culminating match which, as later events proved, was the eighth bout.

On Thursday, Jan. 19, the Owls meet the Overbrook School for the Blind Jayvees on the latter's mats.

Summary of the meet:
95 lb. class—Jim Shapcott, Bensalem, threw F. Wallin, George School, with a half nelson and arm lock in 1:47.
105 lb. class—D. Kester, George School, defeated Cliff Adams, Bensalem, on a referee's decision. Score: Bensalem, 5; George School, 3.
115 lb. class—S. Graham, George School, defeated George Fleming, Bensalem, on a referee's decision. Score: George School, 6; Bensalem, 5.
125 lb. class—Harvey Rigby, Bensalem, won a referee's decision over K. Swayne, George School. Score: Bensalem, 8; George School, 6.
135 lb. class—Capt. Southgate, George School, won over Bob Scarborough, Bensalem, on a referee's decision. Score: George School, 9; Bensalem, 5.
145 lb. class—Alex Deane, Bensalem, defeated T. Hollowell, George School, on a referee's decision. Score: Bensalem, 11; George School, 9.
155 lb. class—Elwood Sileo, Bensalem, won over H. Smith, George School, on a referee's decision. Score: Bensalem, 14; George School, 9.
165 lb. class—G. Cadwallader, George School, scored a referee's decision over Jack Scarborough, Bensalem. Score: Bensalem, 14; George School, 12.
185 lb. class—F. Wilson, George School, with a double wing lock, dropped Warren Jester, Bensalem, in 2:40. Final score: George School, 17; Bensalem, 14.

Score by bouts:
Bensalem 5 0 0 2 0 3 3 0 0 17
George School 0 3 2 0 2 0 0 3 5 17
Results of preliminary bouts:
125 lb. class (a)—Byram Reynolds, Bensalem, won over R. Wilson, George School, on a referee's decision.
125 lb. class (b)—Charles Vansant, Bensalem, defeated Van Horn, George School, on a referee's decision.
135 lb. class—Bob Reynolds, Bensalem, scored a referee's decision over F. Hollowell, George School.
145 lb. class (a)—George Lauer, Bensalem, won on a referee's decision over H. Fraser, George School.
145 lb. class (b)—Bill Lamon and Gillard, George School, wrestled to a draw.

OFFER DOUBLE WIND-UP ON BOXING CARD TONIGHT

TRENTON, Jan. 16—Fistic followers will be treated to another double wind-up, when Promoter Sammy Perro presents his second action crammed show tonight at the Trenton Arena.

The bout which is attracting the most attention is a "natural," bringing together Angelo (Tony) Magliano and Larry Mangine for the "championship of Chambersburg." Both boys are being trained by ex-fighters and the bout should be the best on the show.

The other eight-round windup will pit Bobby Green, leading contender for the Pennsylvania bantamweight title, against Moech Murphy, unbeaten Trenton puncher. Green has never failed to fight a return match wherever he has fought. He is rated one of the best club fighters in the country and Murphy should be in for a hot evening.

Gus Alexander, Roebling Negro, who won the Trenton Times A. A. and New York Daily News Golden Gloves honors before turning pro, will tangle with Felix De Paoli, Philadelphia slugger, who also captured Golden Glove honors before turning pro.

Vince De La, Trenton lightweight, will trade punches with Joe Stack, Philadelphia leather pusher, in another six. De La scored a technical knockout victory over Tony Piccinetti on the last Arena show.

The final six will send Tiger Hall, ponderous Trenton Negro, against Eddie Miller, of Philadelphia. Miller is a hard puncher and should give the crowd plenty of action.

EDGELY

Miss Joy Reed was pleasantly surprised Friday evening at a birthday dinner planned by her mother, Mrs. Robert Reed. Miss Reed, upon returning home from her aunt's home, found a number of little guests assembled at the dinner table. While eating their dinner the children heard Uncle Don over station WOR congratulate Joy and tell her where she would find her birthday gifts. Those present were: Doris and Lois Baker, "Eddie" Johnson, Betty, Joseph and Emma King, George Baker, Jeanne and Eunice Reed, Dorothy Baker and Elaine Reed. The evening was spent in playing games.

The Edgely Rod & Gun Club will hold its January meeting tonight in the Heardley Manor fire house. President Harry Pitman desires as many members present as possible.

AT SECOND FOR INDIANS - By Sords

BRISTOL HIGH ANNOUNCES SCHEDULE REVISION

Charles Utz, faculty manager of athletics at Bristol High, announced the revision of the present basketball card for the local passers by filling one date which was the only open one on the Cards' slate and inserting another at the close of the current season.

The date which was left open for Friday, January 20, on which night the Cardinals were to have met the Fallington Falcons at Trenton, was filled by the New Jersey School for the Deaf. The original tilt with the Falcons was set back to February 20, thus leaving the above date open.

However, the Mutes have consented to be guests of the Cardinals at the local floor on the same evening and thereby fills the entire Bristol schedule. The final tilt of the season is the one which was originally scheduled as the opener for Coach Juenger's boys—that in which they were to have met the Alumni five. This contest was postponed due to the installation of a new heating system and discontinuance of classes at Bristol during the first week in January. Thus, the Alumni fray was set back to Friday, March 3, and of course will be played on the local court. With the addition of the Jersey Deaf outfit and the insertion of the postponed game with the Alumni, Bristol's 1939 schedule now includes 18 instead of 17 games.

SECOND-HALF RACE TO OPEN HERE TONIGHT

The second-half race of the Bristol Basketball League will open tonight with two games being scheduled on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. In the first tilt, Grundy's will play St. Ann's, and in the second encounter Manhattan lines up against the Goodwill team.

Several new faces are expected in the tilts. St. Ann's A. A. winners of the first half, is the only club which is standing pat on its original line-up. Grundy's has made several changes which are intended to strengthen the woolen-makers considerably.

Manhattan Soap has signed another lanky player which brings its line-up to among the league-leaders, with Betts, Zeffries, Harkins and Seneca already in the line-up. Goodwill, with Bruce Gillard in his stride, is expected to give the soap-makers their first set-back of the second half. Goodwill led the first half until the tie-off games.

First game is scheduled to start at eight o'clock sharp.

Tremendous Value On Pre-War Colonies

came an Australian mandate; West Samoa went under New Zealand mandate; and the Caroline, Marshall and the Marianne groups went under Japanese mandate.

Although the British press has sought to minimize the value of the mandated colonies as an argument to show that Germany would gain nothing by their acquisition, it is generally agreed by impartial observers that they are of tremendous value.

Some of the territories are rich in diamonds, especially in South West Africa where Britain has almost closed down the fields in order to avoid competition with Kimberly. The little tiny island of Nauru is known as the "richest island in the world" because of its large deposits of phosphates, Cocoa, ivory, and the usual tropical crops abound in all the colonies.

It is a prize which could well be in the hands of any nation. A thorough survey of the British press, as exemplified by London newspapers, clearly shows that the government is preparing the nation for the advent of the problem.

It is the next great issue which will have to be settled between Germany and the British Empire.

MAY HAVE FOOTBALL AT PERKASIE UNDER LIGHTS

PERKASIE, Jan. 16—There is a possibility that night football may be on the Sellersville-Perkasie High School and the Sellersville Green-jackets schedule next Fall if the costs are not prohibitive.

Dr. C. A. Kressley and Alfred Harr of the Joint Board's athletic committee and manager R. K. Shelly, of the Greenjackets had secured tentative estimates on the installation of flood lights at the Consolidated high school field. These figures run close to $3,000 for a fully equipped lighting system.

Mr. Shelly also submitted a bid for a rental basis and there is a probability that some arrangement along these lines may be made.

The Joint Board's property committee consisting of W. Mark Bittle and William Horn were added to the school group to give the matter further study.

Should the plan be accepted the High School team and the Greenjackets would share the field. In view of their successful season the Greenjackets, through manager Shelly, presented the Joint Board with a check for $10 as a gesture of good will. This was in addition to the rental charge of $100 paid at the beginning of the football season.

Two youths representing a Perkasio group of basketball players appeared at the meeting to ask for the rental of the S-P gymnasium for their home games and the Board granted their request on a rental basis of $20 per night.

Prof. L. N. Snyder was delegated to attend the Pennsylvania School Directors' Association meeting at Harrisburg, February 3 and 4. Robert Ambacher will represent the Sellersville Board and Roland Benner will represent the Perkasio Board. President William High appointed the following committees: Athletic, Alfred Harr and Dr. C. A. Kressley; Property, W. M. Bittle and William Horn; Supply, Roland Benner and W. E. Baum.

Roland T. Moyer, tax collector, for Sellersville borough, made one of the best showings in collect-us in recent years, by turning over approximately 85 per cent of the property tax duplicate and 60 per cent of the per capita tax and the County Treasurer sent delinquent property tax, as the result of sales and settlements, to the amount of $825.93.

The secretary, Walter E. Baum, reported that the officers has purchased $2700 worth of U. S. Saving bonds from sinking fund cash. These will mature in ten years at $3600.

What's the World coming to?

With dictators in various lands screaming and smashing their way to power . . . the nations of the globe getting ready for war in the air, under the sea, on the sea and on land . . . their peoples either mad with lust for battle or filled with fear and foreboding . . . civilization recoiling in fright . . . twenty years after THE WAR TO END WAR was fought—

Does all of this mean that a ruthless man wants to be a WORLD DICTATOR?

H. G. WELLS
British Novelist and Historian

H. G. WELLS, foremost British novelist, thinks so! You will remember he is the author of "OUTLINE OF HISTORY", "THE WAR OF THE WORLDS" and many other startling books.

He has met, talked with and studied some of the present day dictators, and now, in vivid words tells what he thinks the future has in store and dramatically portrays what he fancies will be the impending conflict of DICTATORSHIPS with DEMOCRACIES.

H. G. WELLS' NEW NOVEL entitled

THE HOLY TERROR
